The Science of Superstition.

- Mahantesh Vastred

In this scientific era of many discoveries and inventions, science making the impossible possible with the blink of an eye, there's no place for superstition. Science and superstitions are poles apart. Yet they are the two sides of the same coin unknown of their interdependence. Superstitions are self-proposed selfish beliefs, something imaginary yet unimaginable disbelief, or mere beliefs. But science - the most well-known and popular word of this era, science as it believed to be something realistic which even makes the unreal real; the unachievable achievable.

Science in itself is a sweet beginning, and sometimes a bitter ending whereas superstitions have neither beginning nor end, it is complete in itself. But still, these two unrealistic and realistic, unimaginable and imaginable, never-ending and ever-ending concepts are interconnected somewhere beyond the universe by some unpredictable threads of God. Science completes superstitions in the same way as reasons complete assumptions. Reason sometimes fail to explain rendering the assumptions to be almost dark and black. And sometimes baseless reasons succeed in explaining a taboo.

Let's have a quick look at the following superstition beliefs.

Ghosts residing in peepal trees

This myth continues to prevail even today. But the scientific reason behind this is that the trees use carbon dioxide during the day and releases oxygen but at night, it is the other way round. So, when you sleep under the tree, the excess carbon dioxide level can make you feel heavy in the fat and dilated which is associated with the feeling of being possessed by some spirit.
